THE BUNCO MAN.

Still Works Same Old Tricks and Catches the Unwary.

Arlington and Lexington Not Free from Sharpers' Schemes —Smooth Words and Fine Clothes Make Favorable Impression—Now Victims Think Much but Talk Little.

A large delegation of Arlington business men would like very much to see a man who gave them a call some time ago and induced them to enter into an advertising scheme. They paid their French Reform Skirt Supporter money in advance and have not seen man, money or the advertising since. They are wondering if they have been the subjects of the bunco man, and as the days go by their faith in mankind is constantly decreasing. If nothing is heard within a week they will be convinced they have been played, and will no longer laugh at the poor but honest farmer when he buys a gold brick or farmer when he buys a gold brick or tries his luck at three card monte. Some three months or more ago a smooth talking and well dressed young man gave the Arlington merchants and business men a call. He carried with him a large frame which encrosed a nicely designed advertising dodge. The plan as outlined was to insert a time table in the middle of the sign, surround it with business cards and other advertising inscriptions in colors. This was to be covered with glass and was to hang in the most conspicuous place in the corridor or front of the postoffice building. The next step was the request of a deposit in advance, and various prices were charged according to the space used or the amount of advertising inserted. In nearly every instance the money was forthcoming, and the stranger left the town with many dollars more than he had come with. For some time the supposed victims kept the facts of the case to themselves, thinking all was well, and that the great advertising scheme which would make dollars roll into their coffers would soon be the admiration of the public and the envy of competitors. But when no man or framework appeared, possible loss of money and the thoughts of being buncoed flashed through their minds; it was decided to investigate the matter. One of the number called at a place on Washington street, in Boston, which was alleged to be the headquarters of the business, but no one there appeared to know of any such advertising which was alleged to be the headquarters of the business, but no one there appeared to know of any such advertising firm, and did not pretend to have ever heard of it. Then the unpleasant thoughts of bunco became more impressed upon the minds of those who had advanced their hard earned cash, and although a ray of hope still remains in some of their several breasts, the recollections of the affair grow more and more disagreeable.

of the affair grow more and more disagreeable.

When any one of the alleged victims enters the postoffice block his eyes turn upward toward the spot where the "great scheme" was booked to be, but they quickly drop their eyes again and resolve they have been done.

COMMUNICATION.

Editor Enterprise—On last Thursday morning the woods and orchards were suddenly eloquent with the sorgs of robins. During the day the woods were as suddenly noisy with the popping of firearms. It is well known that the slaughter of song-birds is being carried on by thoughtless, or heartless, persons. Is there not a severe fine to be imposed upon these destroyers of bird life? The slaughter should be stopped. Who will suggest the best method for bringing the bird hunters to justice?

Lexington and gone. He has departed to parts unknown, but has left footprints behind. At least one man is said to have felt his seductive influence and is, in consequence, a few dollars to the bad, Whether there are others or not is not quite apparent for those who are obliged to pay for experience do not as a rule speak of it to their friends and neighbors. The one man who was touched by the smooth talker is alleged to be George S. Norris, a well known Lexington farmer. Although Mr. Norris does not openly admit that he was a victim, it is known he met the gentleman in question and he is not over anxious to discuss the affair in public. It all happened one day last week while Mr. Norris was in East Lexington, He had been paying his regular weekly visit in that village when he was accosted by a man about 30 years of age who was driving a first class rig. The stranger stated that he was advertising stationery for a certain concern and although he could not give it away directly he did so in an indirect manner. He explained that all that was required was to have a deposit of $5 or $10 and then the stationery with the money was to be returned. The time-honored gag of the professional bunco is well known to the majority of people, but now and then a stranger to the scheme learns it. The money, if forthcoming, is placed in an envelope and apparently put into the box of stationery. Instead a similar envelope containing paper is substituted and before the innocent party thinks of looking into this envelope the bunco man is out of reach.

Mr. Norris does not admit being taken mit that he was a victim, it is known he

The bold, bad bunco man has been in

into this envelope the bunco man is out of reach.

Mr. Norris does not admit being taken in, but the circumstances connected with the case would give that inference. He says the man was well dressed, had a sandy complexion and light hair, just above the medium build, and drove a bay horse with a white face, which was attached to a fine looking Goddard buggy. Mr. Norris does not know whether the stranger called on any others or not. He also says he would know him again if he saw him anywhere, and asserts that the man was one of the smoothest talkers he ever saw, and he was of the opinion that the bunco man could make money if he would work for it honestly for the stranger showed his smartness.

Some of the description which was given by Mr. Norris tallies with that of a man who has been engaged in similar work elsewhere and is known in police circles.

A. B. C. LADIES' NIGHT.

In spite of the disagreeable weather, In spite of the disagreeable weather, a large number of the lady friends of the members of the Arlington Boat club attended the ladies' night dance which took place at the club house, on the shores of Spy pond, last Thursday evening. Great credit is due the entertainment committee, Messrs, Willis, Wellington and Rankin, who managed the party, for the success of the occasion. Custer's orchestra furnished the music, which was of the best. Encores were frequent and the enthusiasm was great. Frappe was served during the dancing, which continued until twelve.

Some of the guests noticed present were Mrs. W. H. N. Francis, Mrs. A. M. Wheeler, Mrs. A. J. Wellington, Mrs. W. E. Hardy, Misses Peirce, Lowe, Hardy, Bennett, Hattle and Jennie Gott, Hillard, Homer, Marston, and Colman, of Arlington, Misses Hill and Fletcher, of Belmont, Misses Butterfield, of Winchester, Mrs, and Miss Smith, of Wakefield, Miss Dalton and party, of Boston, and Miss Bird and party, of Cambridge, Miss Emma Puffer had with her a group of Radcliffe college students, including the Misses James, Judkins, and Story. An adjourned town meeting was held at Watertown, Tuesday evening. All of the special appropriations were referred to this time. It was expected there would be some lively kicking, but only once or twice was there any opposition to any of the matters that came up for action.

The matter of remodeling the old bans

The matter of remodeling the old bank building as a police station, and the purchase of the old Methodist church property on Main street, were stricken from the warrant.

It was expected that these two items in the warrant would cause a hot discussion, but the disposition made of them spoiled the fun.

A committee comprising the selectmen and four citizens to be named by the moderator was appointed to consider the advisability of widening North Beacon, Arsenal and Galen streets. This committee was instructed to ascertain the cost of the proposed work, land damages, etc., and to report to the town at a later meeting. following appropriations

The following appropriations were made: $25,000 to pay a portion of the town debt; $10,000 for a trunk line of sewers in the Waverley district; $10,000 to provide a more adequate system of surface drainage; $500 for a public play-ground; $300 for Memorial day; $350 for a new piano for the town hall, and $300 to publish an army and navy register of the town.

SHAKESPEARE CLUB.

Presentation of "Monsieur Beaucaire" By Leland T. Powers.

By Leland T. Powers,

Booth Tarkington's charming dramatic character sketch, "Monsieur Beaucaire," was most pleasingly presented by Leland T. Powers at the Old Belfry clubhouse, last Monday night. The entertainment was in the charge of James P. Prince, president of the Shakespeare club, under whose auspices it was given. Mr. Powers' rendition of the dialogue was excellent, his transition from one character to another being accomplished easily and gracefully, aided greatly by his fine presence and well modulated voice. But his versatility and range of expression were shown to an even greater extent in the scene from King Henry IV, which he appended to the program as an after-piece. After a brief, but graphic description of the situation in Act III, Scene III. of the second part of the play, Mr. Powers plunged immediately into the dialogue and kept his audience in a state of alternate laughter and applause by his brilliant rendering of the text, together with the rapidity and skill with which he exchanged characters. At the close he was recalled by the warmth and enthusiasm of the applause. The hall was filled nearly to its utmost capacity, some 300 persons being present.

ANNUAL MEETING.

ANNUAL MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Baptist church society was held Monday evening in the vestry of the Universalist church, with William E. Wood as moderator. The following officers were elected: Standing committee, Franklyn Wyman, William E. Wood, Wendell E. Richardson, J. Howell Crosby and John G. Leitch; treasurer, George D. Allen; collector, W. Thorning Wood; auditors, William B. Wood, B. F. Clough; clerk, Stephen B. Wood; music committee, William E. Wood, chairman, Benjamin Conant and Charles B. Deveraux.

The society voted to raise forty-eight hundred and thirty dollars for the coming year. E. Nelson Blake, chairman of the building committee, made a full and concise report of the progress being made in the building of the church edifice. It is expected that the new church building will be ready for occupancy in the early autumn. The heating arrangements are all perfected and in working order. The church organ will be one of the finest in the vicinity of Boston.

A PRETTY WEDDING.

That was a pretty wedding Tuesday evening at the home of the bride in Weston. The contracting parties were Ralph E. Saunders, of Arlington, and Miss Charlotte Louise Patterson, of Weston. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Charles H. Watson, D. D., of Academy street. The bride was gowned in a brown traveling suit. She wore flowers in her hair, Miss Patterson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. The best man was Edward Richardson, of Revere. The rooms were prettily decorated with a choice variety of flowers. The presents, of silver, cut glass, and many articles of household use, were testimonials of the many friends of the newly married pair. Mr. and Mrs. Saunders are to make their home at No. 5 Mills street.

Anent the recent discussion at the state Anent the recent discussion at the state house, concerning the wisdom of compulsory vaccination, and in view of the present decision of the local board of health to rigidly enforce the compulsory vaccination law, in this city, the views of Dr. Henry O. Marcy, of Cambridge and Boston, a physician and surgoon of international reputation, are of special interest. special interest.

At a recent meeting of the Loyal Le-gien, in Boston, Dr. Marcy read a pa-per entitled: "A Vaccination Lesson of the Late War of the Rebellion During the Slege of Charleston, S. C., in the winter of 1864."

the Siege of Charleston, S. C., in the winter of 1864."

Dr. Marcy said:
In the autumn of 1863 smallpox broke out in Norfolk, Va., and assumed such proportions that the late Henry A. Martin, of Roxbury, Mass., was employed by the government to superintend the vaccunation of the soldiers and civilians of Norfolk and vicinity. Dr. Martin is the best recognized authority on vaccination that the century has produced since Jenner, and was the first to introduce animal vaccine into America. Under his supervision the epidemic soon ceased. "During the winter of 1863 and 1864 we had about 1500 infantry more or less actively engaged in the siege of Charleston, S. C. Not a case of smallpox had occurred on the island. Under my supervision at this time was the 1st regiment of North Carolina volunteers, afterward known as the 35th U. S. colored troops, James C. Beecher colonel. When the regiment was ordered to the siege of Charleston, a detachment remained in Norfolk, These men numbering 110 under the charge of an officer, were sent on a small sailing vessel, rejoining their regiment on the island, Jan, 31. En route one man died, and no report was made, of course, since there was no route one man died and no report was made, of course, since there was no medical attendant on board. These men seemed well, save the discomfort of the rather long tedious winter voyage. They were at once consigned to their respective companies without any special experience.

"Feb. 8 one of these men reported to "Feb. 8 one of these men reported to sick call, a serious sufferer with head-ache, backache, fever, etc. No eruption and no thought of smallpox. Of this de-tachment by noon the following day 15 men were taken very ill. A careful study of these cases caused me to become as-sured that they were ill with smallpox. I then learned for the first time that the

I then learned for the first time that the man who died en route was taken in a similar way and broken out with an eruption before his death. Hence, all too clearly, was evidence of a like exposure of all these men.

"What was to be done? The news had spread like wildfire through the entire command, and a panic almost approaching insubordination ensued. Receiving from my brigade commander full authority. I at once established an isoauthority. I at once established an isolated camp, and removed everyone be-longing to the detachment into it. I set up an ample number of hospital tents, and detailed a medical officer to take charge of these.

"Dr. De Grasse, of Boston, my efficient "Dr. De Grasse, of Boston, my efficient assistant, and myself carried the sick men on stretchers, and placed them on bees prepared for their reception. This we were obliged to do personally, as not a soldier could be induced to touch the we were obliged to do personally, as not a soldier could be induced to touch the sick. My next duty was to look for vaccine virus. I found I had a few crusts put up in wax and issued by the medical department, but these at the best I knew were of small value. A number of the men protested that they should not be required to enter the isolated camp, as they had recently been vaccinated at Norfolk, and in attestation showed me their arms, still sore, and, fortunately, carrying large crusts, demonstrating the value of their vaccination. Joyfully I accepted these as a Godsend of protection, carefully made them into thin paste with glycerine, and Dr. De Grasse and I began our work of vaccination, commencing with ourselves. All night long the dusky procession passed in bare-armed review, and before noon the next day the 800 men and before noon the next day the 800 men

Then came the cleaning of camp. to sich everyone gave eager aid, and in another day we were undoubtedly the eleanest regiment on the island. The one man hardest to control was the assistant surgeon, detailed in charge of the isolated camp. To my astonishment he coolly walked into my quarters the following day, and demanded to be relieved post of duty was made emphatic with the added injunction that the patrol was ordered to hait and, if not obeyed to shoot the man who attempted to leave camp, and to this order there could be no exception. This was the last time I saw the poor fellow who resigned his commission later in the year, but his requisitions were filled to the letter.

"It is needless to say that the two weeks following were days of great anxiety. Careful inspection of arms and revaccinations were made the most important of daily duties. At last the dreaded vaccinations were made the most important of daily duties. At last the dreaded period of danger was ended. Not a single soldier of over 800 thus exposed to the dread disease had even the slightest attack of varioloid, and when some days later, we salled away enroute for an expedition to Florida, it is safe to believe that I was the happiest man in the entire command. tire command. "But what of the detachment in the

"But what of the detachment in the isolated camp left behind? Out of a total of 110 men over 80 took the disease and 40 deaths attested the virulence of this dread scourge which with a similar fatality, for the centuries before Jenner, swept the civilized world.

"It is probably not generally known that during the regime of slavery the owners in most instances deliberately preferred not to vaccinate their slaves, trusting to the security of isolation incident to plantation life.

"I have made this contribution to medical military authority, not solely because from vaccination in a way that civic life could hardly render.

"This generation has become so immunized from the severer forms of smallpox, because of vaccination, that few, even of the medical profession, can now realize the precious boon which Jenner conferred upon the race. It is to such ignorance alone that can be attributed a prejudice against proper vaccination and the insistent attacks that have been made against its enforcement."

TWENTY-FIRST EXHIBIT.

At the age of "twenty-one" the youth of the race pass into the domain of manhood; and thereafter take their places with mature men everywhere. In this year of our Lord 1902, the 21st exhibition of the old Massachusetts Charitable Mechanic association takes place, it will indeed exemplify the change from old time methods, inventions and devices, and enter the realm of mature manhood, with up-to-date exhibits; in this, the 108th year of its existence.

Sixty-five years ago it held its first exhibition of science, art and industry, in the city of Boston. Nearly twenty years earlier it had given prizes for mechanical excellence; but not until 1837, 32 years after its organization, did it hold a regular exhibition; gathering many hundreds of exhibits from all over New England, and covering nearly every branch of productive industry;—with boards of judges, upon whose awards medals and diplomas were first given. Since that time at intervals of about three years, it has repeated its labors and efforts to encourage and stimulate new inventions-improve old processes—and thus advance the general prosperity and welfare of the people.

The records of the past century are full the general prosperity and welfare of the people.

The records of the past century are full of instances where in this way this old association has been a real help to our mechanical interests; and no small part of the wonderful growth of our New Eng'and industries may be traced to this beneficent work.

Within that time most of the cities and large towns of New England have contributed something to the volume of exhibits shown; and there is probably not a hamlet which has not had some of its citizens among the visitors, which, numbering hundreds of thousands, have passed its doors in search of instruction, pleasure and profit.

And these great exhibitions, with their manifold lessons in skill, in design and in workmanship, covering the whole range of materials used in all of the many fields of human comfort or necessity—whether in the dwelling, warehouse, church, school, public or private institution—these are to be repeated this year on a new and improved plan, which with their long experience, is likely to prove uncommonly attractive and preful.

their long experience, is likely to prove uncommoniy attractive and useful.

On the 22d dav of September next the doors of the huge "Mechanics building," so well known at this time as the great meeting place of everything of magnitude in Boston, in the form of political or other large gatherings, besides numerous fairs and shows in variety quite confusing—will open to receive the influx of the multitudes who will go there to be entertained, instructed and amused. No visitor can fail to be entertained by the vastness and variety of the exhibits, arranged so systematically that they seem almost a city in themselves:—instructed by the character of many of the exhibits, showing the processes in detail by which skilled workmen fabricate the thousand and one objects which go to make up no inconsiderable part of our home and other surroundings—and amused by the eye and inconsiderable part of our home and other surroundings—and amused by the display of much that nleases the eye and the strains of music that charm the ear. At this early day it would not be possible to descend to particulars, which, if told, might be for otten perore the day fixed for the opening. It is enough to know that the management of this association, numbering some of the leading mechanics and business men of Boston in their ranks, are deeply interested in planning and carrying out the work to be performed in so many directions within the next seven months, before their big engines will turn the ponderous wheels to set this huge hive of busy bees in motion. Meanwhile our readers will not forset the "good time coming" and be prepared for the final announcement.

In the nature of the case this exhibition cannot be a duplicate in detail of any of its predecessors, for the world of

in the nature of the case this exhibi-tion cannot be a duplicate in detail of any of its predecessors, for the world of invention and improvement moves on so fast that the fabrications of yesterday give place of necessity to the newer born ideas, devices and constructions of to-day. As an illustration of the changing character of the times in the mechanical world, it may be mentioned that when this great building was erected, only 20

world, it may be mentioned that when this great building was erected only 20 years ago, it was provided with long lines of shafting thousands of feet in length, running the entire length of the building, with all the necessary complement of beiting, hangers and pulleys.

Today this is all taken down and sold for "junk," the electric motor wholly superseding this "old-fashloned" method of transmitting power. To such as can command a spare moment to think seriously of this, these wholesale changes in the means of accomplishing work of this nature in so short a time, are furnished with an object lesson in evolution of the most striking kind. So in this 21st exhibition, floor after floor will see machinery in motion doing its appointed work with no sign of where the mighty giant is located who is turning those wheels: Thus one of the many marvels of electrical development will be well illustrated. From time to time, as the multitude of devices are installed in their places, more of detail will be given; and we may well believe that when the whole is complete, more than one visit will be necessary to secure all the lessons to be learned there from teachers without eyes, sury to secure all the lessons to be learned there from teachers without eyes or ears or tongues.—but exceedingly effi-cient in enforcing upon the visitors valuable lessons in inventive skill, never to be forgotten.

ANUNYMOUS GIFT.

The receipt of an anonymous gift of $30,000 by the Harvard college observatory, is announced by Prof. Edward C. Pickering, the director. As no restrictions are placed upon the expenditure of the fund, it is proposed to use half of it immediately for extending the building in which the university's invaluable library of astronomical photographs, now numbering more than 115,000, and increasing every month, is kept.

The present building was put up nine years ago, and its accommodations long since became insufficient for housing the collection of negatives, which furnishes a history of the entire stellar universe for the last 12 years, and which is not duplicated anywhere in the world.

A wing large enough to anticipate the growth of many years will be erected and such provision will be made that the photographs can be used for study by a large number of astronomers at one the photographs can be used for study by a large number of astronomers at one time, which has been impossible heretofore.

It is intended that the observatory's very valuable library of astronomical books, which is unique in its completeness, and which is now in a building half a century old, where it is in constant danger of destruction by fire, shall some day be placed in the photographic building, when money has been received for a new building for their storage. The new wing will be built with an idea of its future use as a library for books.

A part of the $10,000 of the anonymous gift which will remain after the constitution. A part of the $10,000 or the anonymous gift, which will remain after the construction of the new wing, is to be employed at once in a minute study of the stellar photographs and the remainder will be set aside as a reserve fund.

MORE THAN ENOUGH.

Generous friends of Harvard university, interested in the field of medical research and investigation, have made good the three-quarters of a million, upon the raising of which the gift of a million dollars by John D. Rockefeller was contingent, and thus the erection of one of the finist medical schools in the world becomes possible.

The gift of a million dollars by J. P. Morgan, the million promised conditionally by John D. Rockefeller, property held and the income of the Harvard medical school, with the subscriptions, gives a fund approaching $5,000,000.

In the report made by Dr. J. Collins Warren and Dr. H. P. Bowditch, who have done great service in raising the fund, they say: "These generous gifts are sufficient to secure a larger and more useful medical school, sufficiently endowed for its ordinary work. It is hoped that the great and useful field of medical work and investigation thus opened will inspire further gifts and endowments."

The recent gift by Mrs. Collis P. Huntington of $20,000 carried the amount of

The recent gift by Mrs. Collis P. Huntington of $250,000 carried the amount of subscriptions beyond that required to insure the gift of a million dollars from John D. Rockefeller.

It isn't everybody who is as fortunate as my friend Frank McDonald, of Mt. Auburn. He owns a comfortable farm at Bedford, Mass., which he cultivates and has stocked with various domestic animals, whither, when business cares press too heavily, he hies himself for a change of scene and air. These changes prove very beneficial to him. he tells me, as he thus temporarily shuts out the busy world from his thoughts, and drinks in the restful rural environment. He often goes up to the farm on his saddle horse, and it isn't so far away but he can reach there in less than an hour. The farm is quite extensive and isolated, but, in company with a congenial friend or two, lonesomeness never invades its precincts, and each visit makes a new man, physically, out of him. It is certainly an ideal way for a busy man to spend his leisure and gain strength and inspiration for his dally grind. But all of us are not so fortunate as to possess such an elysium, although next to owning such a place is to be his guest. ["The Chronicler" in the Cambridge Chronicle.

Tourists and all lovers of art have always expressed the greatest surprise at the cleverness of our American Indians as shown in their beautiful specimens of basketry. Very recently some of our club women have taken up the study of basketry, and having mastered it themselves, are instructing their cihidren in the fascinating work. One of the best known studios where this work is taught is conducted by Florence M. Hutchins, in Huntington chambers, Huntington avenue. Miss Hutchins also teaches sloyd work and makes all kinds of basket tabourettes, music racks, small tables, etc., to order.

It seems strange that the strikers cannot see that they are playing directly into the hands of the corporation they seek to ruin, and that under any settlement which does not please the Brine corporation, which is reaping golden harvest from the trouble, the latter has the power to perpetuate the cause of the strike. The Brine corporation may carry on business as it chooses, for the courts have so decided. The railroads and steamboats being common carriers must take goods from the Brine corporation without discrimination, for business policy and, what is very much more, Federal law has so ordained. Given these two indisputable propositions and it is hard to see what opportunity there is for arbitration. An arbitration board is only available when both parties to a dispute submit their case to it and agree to abide by its decision. It is not as we understand it a court, and has no real power. There is but one aggrieved party in this case. The Brine corporation has nothing which it wishes arbitrated, has now no grievance, and except for the general welfare of the community, has no particular interest in seeing the strike ended. All that it has asked for, what it will continue to ask for, and what it will continue to have, is absence of discrimination and the permission to do its business in its own way, and to this state of things the strikers must succumb.

AN INTERESTING CAREER The death of ex-Gov. Altgeld, of Illinois, removes a conspicuous character from American politics. Nowhere else in the world could such a career as his have been possible. Born in Germany, the son of a poor immigrant, a soldier in the Civil war when but a boy, teacher, lawyer, judge, politician and governor-these make the index of a record full of the most intense activities. Estin.ates of him differ widely. Many count him a demagogue; others a sincere and earnest, but erratic reformer. His successes were almost wholly personal, for his support was largely an endorsement as an individual rather than as a representative. He was a vigorous thinker and had unflinching courage for the defence of his views. He will be missed in the middle West, in the political movements of the next few years.

BENDING TO THE BLAST The Westminster Chambers bill seems to have got a black eye in the legislature, the petitioners for relief from existing laws and immunity from their violation being given "leave to withdraw." Although the real meaning of the bill was veiled, no ambiguous language was used by Corporation Counsel Bailey, who appeared before the committee representing Mayor Collins, who had introduced the bill. Mr. Bailey said in effect that he would not urge the passage of the bill as the mayor realized that the public indignation was so intense that the people would not stand for it. He tried to postpone the evil day for the Chambers people by recommending that the matter be carried over to the next general court, but did not get even that crumb of comfort.

[From The Saturday Evening Post.]

To most persons a big street railway system is a gigantic mechanism by means by which passengers are conveyed from place to place along certain definite routes. from; and how a sufficient number of them is secured. How are they trained for the responsibilities resting upon them—responsibilities far beyond those of the average clerk in even important offices; responsibilities that call for judgment, patience, tact and quickness of thought in the daily routine of their duties as well as in meeting suddan emergencies where both life and property are sometimes at stake?

Again, what inducements does this business offer a young man for an honorable career of achievement? Is there an opportunity for motormen, conductors and other subordinates to rise to higher positions of responsibility?

For the most part these questions must be answered, in the present article, from the standpoint of the Bosion Elevated railway, not quite the largest in the country, to be sure, but in many respects the most complicated and the most diversified, including, as it does, surface, subway and elevated lines, joined in a single comprehensive system, and requiring, therefore, an unusual variety of abilities among its various employees. TEACHER OF PIANOFORTE New classes are being formed in Somerville, Cambridge, Arlington and Arlington Heights, to begin lessons the weeks of Feb. 3 and Feb. 10 Other classes will be formed at any time when the required number of pupils are obtained. This system was the first of its nature in the United States and Canada to be endorsed by musicians and adopted in musical institutions, and to receive favorable criticisms from musical critics. A mother, speaking with much feeling, expressed it as her firm conviction that the Fletcher method of teaching music was the greatest boon in the direction of child education since the wonderful work of Froebel.

The difference in the two duties may perhaps be explained by saying that the training of the conductor contributes to his development in the handling of human emergencies, so to speak—a training which he must have largely acquired from his own experience in dealing with men—and that the training of a motorman fits him to meet physical emergencies, and must consequently in a large degree be special. In Boston there is a regular school for elevated motormen, which is perhaps more thorough, in certain respects—and necessarily so on account of the special difficulties of the Boston situation—than those which have For the most part these questions must be answered, in the present article, from the standpoint of the Bosion Elevated railway, not quite the largest in the country, to be sure, but in many respects the most complicated and the most diversified, including, as it does surface, subway and elevated lines, joined in a single comprehensive system, and requiring ing therefore, an unusual variety of abilities among its various employees.

The ordinary public conception of the car service men of a street railway is erroneous in that it fails to recognize that in nearly all cases these are picked men—a relatively small number selected from many, chosen with reference to their physical and mental ability to perform work that cannot be satisfactorily accomplished except by men of peculiar fitness—men who must possess, whatever their position, a fair share of real ability.

But the motorman or conductor who is fit stands a much better chance of getting ahead and finally attaining a responsible and well paid position than does the average clerk, let us say, in the average department store, Many, of course, enter the street railway service for temporary employment only. Lumbermen, for example, after passing the winters in Maine, come down to Boston in considerable numbers for the summer, months, College students—a class in which Boston and the neighboring towns abound—desiring to earn money during "from the ground up." are alert to select from the conductors and motormen the men fit for advancement, for this continuous search for competency is obviously to the advantage of the company, which has positions for which sometimes it seems almost impossible to find exactly the right men—positions, moreover, that require a previous training "from the ground up."

WHAT A STARTER MUST KNOW ABOUT RAILROADING.

As a conductor learns to deal with men and to look after the safety and conve-nience of passengers, so the motorman acquires a knowledge of the routes, the acquires a knowledge of the routes, the track lay-out, the equipment, and the method of moving cars. Either, however, may become a starter, which is commonly the next high position, and one which places a man clearly in line for still higher duties—inspector, chief inspector, division superintendent, and the rest. Becoming a starter, it is to be remembered, marks the accomplishment of perhaps the most difficult sten in the progress updivision superintendent, and the rest. Becoming a starter, it is to be remembered, marks the accomplishment of perhaps the most difficult step in the progress upward. It is easier for a man of conspicuous ability to pass from the ranks of two hundred and fifty starters than from the ranks of five thousand motormen and conductors, for the reason that individual excellence is more easily recognized among a few than among many, however genuine the company's effort to find it among all ranks. Once a starter, a man begins to acquire a fuller knowledge of the operation of a great system, of the handling of traffic in the aggregate, and of the problems that must be mastered before broader fields can be entered upon. He must learn, or must have learned, something of electricity, something of mechanics, a little of civil engineering, a little about track construction, about the repair of cars and about equipment of all sorts, and something about the handling of exceptional and extraordinary crowds at unusual times—in fact, an endless variety of things must be grasped and mastered before he can become an all-round, well equipped official.

Men enter the service from all classes and conditions of life. Most of the men employed by the larger companies are, of course, drawn from the cities in which they operate, but there is a considerable proportion who come from the country. It is a somewhat restrectable fact that, in the east at all events, the old-fashioned farmer's boy is a disappearing type, but it is still noticeable that those who come from the villages and smaller towns are very apt to make excellent railroad men. Indeed, the street railroad business presents a peculiarly favorable entrance to city life for such as these. Work in the

Does your horse "feel his oats"? What a difference between the grain-fed and the grass-fed horse! The first strong and full of ginger, the second flabby, weak and tired out before he begins. The feeding makes the difference.

Children are not alike either. One is rosy, bright-eyed, full of life and laughter, another is pale, weak and dull. The feeding again is responsible.

Sickly children need special feeding. They don't "feel their oats". Scott's Emulsion adds just the right richness to their diet. It is like grain to the horse. The child gets new appetite and strong digestion.

Scott's Emulsion is more than food. It is a strong medicine. It rouses up dull children, puts new flesh on thin ones and red blood into pale ones. It makes children grow. Scott's Emulsion makes ordinary food do its duty. This picture represents the Trade Mark of Scott's helds has inured them to the summer text, and the breaking out of roads in the winter has toughened them to the kind of work required in the fighting of snowstorms, 'iney come from one form of out-of-door life to another; and in changing from country to city—a change which is proverbially full of danger—they thus maintain a connection between they thus maintain a connection between old habits and new which may well be of the greatest advantage, morally as well as from the merely worldly point of view. Most of the officials in Boston who have directly in charge the handling of cars and traffic came into the service trom the country, and have won their way on account of their sound common sense and ability to overcome difficulties, supported by the rugged constitution and sense and ability to overcome difficulties, supported by the rugged constitution and good health which are a heritage from an early life spent mainly in the open air and in all weathers. It must be the feeling of every street railway official—it certainly is in Boston—that the more of these strong, rugged, bright, alert boys from the country apply for employment in the service the better the service will become, and the more faithfully and efficiently it can discharge its duties to the community in which it operates.

become, and the more faithfully and efnciently it can discharge its duties to the community in which it operates.

To such a young man, rightfully ambitious for the future, some preliminary special reading and study will not come amiss. The almost universal use of electricity as the motive power of the modern street railway clearly calls for a more scientific training, on the part of all who would rise in the service, than was formerly required; and the man on the platform who knows something of natural science, other things being equal, is the one most likely to be in demand when the question of promotion to a higher position comes up. A good book on the general problems of electricity will be the natural beginning of a course of reading; though unfortunately not many such, adapted to the comprehension of young men with no previous technical education, have been published. Electricity Made Easy, by Edwin J. Houston and A. E. Kennelly, may be recommended, however, as being on the whole satisfactory. The same authors have written a series of "leaflets"—as they are entitled, in spite of their containing some 300 pages each—on Electrical Engineering, which in the opinion of many electrical students are among the best books of the kind on the market. They come ing, which in the opinion of many electrical students are among the best books of the kind on the market. They come in three grades—elementary, intermediate and advanced—only the first of which, of course, can be recommended to the novice. The object throughout is to present the fundamental principles of electrical science; and the first volume is especially intended to give just such instruction as the motorman, or the electrical tion as the motorman, or the electrical workman generally, with slight scientific knowledge of electricity, needs for a more intelligent performance of his daily routine work. Two other books that may be suggested have to do specifically with electric realizative services.

more intelligent performance of his daily routine work. Two other books that may be suggested have to do specifically with electric railway service—Electric Railway Motors: Their Construction, Opcration and Maintenance, by N. W. Perry and Electric Railway Motors, by George T. Hanchett. Both are sound, and not too difficult.

There are two periodicals covering the street railway field, one or both of which might well be read by every one in the business, from conductor to president—the Street Railway Journal and the Street Railway Review. No scientific or technical periodical, of course, should be regarded from the same point of view as a book, where the intention is to be definite and final in statement and conclusion; a magazine of this sort is to a considerable extent a record of current theory, opinion and experiment, leaving to the reader much of the burden of responsibility for sifting the wheat from the chaff of contemporary practice. With this caution—which applies to every publication of the kind aiming to present impartially the news of its special field—both journals may be unhesitatingly recommended, giving as they do, from issue to issue, a full account of the latest developments in every branch and department of the street railway business all over this country and abroad. Among electrical magazines the Electrical World and the American Electrician are excellent, but rather hard reading for beginners; however, if they are conveniently accessible to a young man they might often prove suggestive. During the last few years a number of "correspondence schools," so called, have been started in various parts of the country, some of the courses in which, I am informed, are admirably adapted to the needs of a young man who intends to enter or has already entered the street railway business. Though it is true that all companies undertake to give their men such instruction as may be necessary for the performance of their duties, it is equally true that one who, hy additional study and reading, has gained a f

CONDUCT RANKLES.

Even the companionship of Littlefield of Maine, which Congressman McCall had in voting against the Republican Philippine tariff bill, is not saving him from the talk of trouble in his district. Republicans who have been smarting under what they consider the misrepresentation of McCall, say that if Maine people care to have Littlefield vote in that way, it is purely their concern, but that they are determined not to standonger such voting by McCall.

It is the younger element which is ringing this sort of talk about it, and trages hardest in Cambridge. The colonial club is apparently content to tand by McCall, and though that has been a staff of strength to Speaker Myrs, it is a question if it will not fall in rying to dictate further for an entire congress onal district. Yet it must be confessed that ex-Senator Joy's announcement that he was out against McCall has not brought any flood of supporters around him, neither has it encouraged others to place themselves in he field. Some have misunderstood his expression as meaning that he was a andidate himself for congress, which is not so.

expression as meaning that he was a andidate himself for congress, which is not so.

Joy is not the man to tire himself in trying for something past and beyond him. As McCall is a Winchester man, he well knows that he would not have any chance in the district, directly following. He has a man in mind, nevertheless, who has not been talked about so far. [Practical Politics.

Joy can have all the men "in mind" he wants to, but they will not stand knee high to a grasshopper beside McCall when it comes to the nomination. McCall could run independent and beat any one that Joy has "in mind" out of his boots, but he won't. He'll run on the Republican ticket, and when it's all over, Joy and the others in his class won't know what's struck them. [Cambridge Chronicle.

WOMEN'S GOLF.

The Woman's Golf association of Boston, composed of the Brae-Burn Golf club of West Newton, the Concord Golf club of Concord, the Country club of Brookline, the Lexington Golf club of Lexington, the Oakley Country club of Watertown, the Vesner-Country club of Watertown, the Wollaston Golf club of Montclair, has arranged to hold its annual championship the first week in June on the course of the wollaston club. The spring series of interclub team matches will begin on April 22 and terminate June 3, and the fall series will open on Sept. 30 and conclude Nov. 11. The arrangement of a seven-club schedule was naturally a difficult task, but it has skilfully been accomplished, and each club will plav six matches at home and six on other links, as will be seen by the following lists:

QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER. The very pleasant things that are being said everywhere about the dramatic ing said everywhere about the dramatis-ation of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" are a source of great gratification to the man-agers of that attraction and to the au-thor and the publishers of the book, from which this play was made. There were so many good authorities in the theatrical world who said the story of the book was too unconventional for stage purposes, and so many who read the dramatization before produced and said it would not attain success because it was so unlike anything else ever presented to a theatre-going public, that the success now is all the sweeter. As has been before noted, the publishers insisted that the dramatization should follow the book closely and be made to suit them or else it would not be produced at all, and they now have the satisfaction of knowing they were right. Or at least the public is showing by packing the theatres wherever the play is presented that they find this odd play to its liking. The play is odd in the sense that it is so different from others, but as a matter of fact it is not odd; it is only a perfectly natural play that a very life-like. The play has been on the boards since last Christmas, and is many cities has repeated its engagements two and three times, and always to crowded houses. It comes to the Boston theatre March 24.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

"St. Patrick's Day in the morning" oc curred Monday and it rained as it usually does on that day of rarest interest to every son and daughter of the Emerald Isle. St. Patrick, as everyone knows was the beloved apostle of Ireland. The history account is that after escaping from slavery, he became educated at Rome. The coming of St. Patrick was in 432. He labored for sixty years in planting churches and schools, thus rooting out the practices of paganism.

St. Patrick is represented as a man of stalwart frame, with that personal magnetism that drew to himself the multitudes. St. Patrick's Day is forever and lovingly dedicated to his memory. Every son of the Emerald Isle is a devoted lover of his native land.

JUSTICE FOR ALL.

With the above words upon his lips, Governor Altgeld died for the oppressed and downtrodden wherever found. He died a hero in the cause of suffering humanity. It is of Altgeld, not as a politician, but as a man, we write. Criticised and even persecuted at times as he was, Altgeld never lost sight of the good that he would do his fellow along the way. His arms were always open and outstretched toward that weaker brother who needed help. When only a lad of 16 years he enlisted and fought through the war of the Rebellion, against slavery. His whole life through he identified him self by word and deed with the great masses of the people. To him the eternal right was a law which could not be honestly evaded. Whatever seemed a duty to him he was bound to execute even though the heavens might fall ereby. He freed the so-called anar-hists, when governor, from a life im-prisonment because he did not believe they were anarchists-and those who denounced him most bitterly then for this act commend him now. Governor Altgeld didn't for a moment hesitate to do what to him seemed right, although it was to cost him his political future. Why is it that men of heroic daring and an inspiring love for the right meet with such cruel criticism and opposition from their kind? Why must the grave close the brave before we let fall a word indi-To become a leader costs something. He who goes before must for the time being be willing to give up his closest and most intimate friends, that he may prepare the way for those who reluctantly and slowly take a step forward. Altgeld was a born leader; persistent and unyielding in his orders, he not infrequently marched on with broken ranks-but nevertheless his word was "forward, march, whether few or many followed. It was beautifully fitting that Altgeld should make that earnest, loving plea for the Boers, and then go out and up with "jus

PLAYGROUND WANTED.

Editor Enterprise: At the town meting, the question of buying land adjoining the Locke school for a playground and a possible enlargement of school facilities in the future will come up. Certainly the urgency is great. The Locke school has the largest number of scholars, except one, in the town. The enrollment is 285. Next year, beyond a question, it will exceed 300. Yet for this large body of children, all of them below the ninth grade, and 69 in the first grade, there is no playground. The only place for recreation before school and during noon and recess is in the street or on private property. Nor can the land in front of the building be converted into a playground if thought best, since it slopes too rapidly. It would surely be a misfortune to ruin the lawn by treading it as bare as the street, by throwing it open to the tramp of 300 children, even if it were suitable for a playground, for something should be conceded to looks in a town so attractive as Arlington.

It is not stating the case too strongly, however, to claim that the purchase of more land in connection with the Locke school would be both wise, far-seeing and just. Every other school in town has a playground, and why should not the Locke have one? Moreover, every other school in town case of one school, at least, a large sum of money was spent, and wisely spent, for a playground.

Fortunately, at present a sufficint amount of land can be secured at a very reasonable cost, and therefore the opportunity for the town to make the purchase is most fortunate. It is not likely that this opportunity will hold for any great length of time.

My purpose is simply to call the attention of the citizens to this matter, not chase is most fortunate. It is not likely that this opportunity will hold for any great length of time.

My purpose is simply to call the attention of the citizens to this matter, not by way of argument for I cannot believe that the town will hesitate to secure the land in question, but to impress it upon our minds, and especially upon the attention of the voters at the Heights that they may be present and look after their interests.

Arlington has the finest and best equipped schoolhouses in any town in the state, and my object in bringing this matter to the attention of the town meeting is to put the citizens in possession of information upon which they will doubtless be glad to act favorably.

Respectfully,
John G. Taylor.

ANNUAL BALL.

The eleventh annual ball of the Arlington Firemen's Relief association, which will be held at the Arlington town hall, will be held at the Arlington town hall, on Easter Monday evening, March 31, will be one of the best ever given in the town. The committee in charge of the affair is working earnestly to give the patrons of the dance a big lot for their money, and as the proceeds are to be used only in case of sickness, accident or death of the members, there is no doubt but that it will be given a liberal patronage. There will be a first class entertainment which will precede the dance, and the talent which will participate includes Dudley Prescott, humorist; Mrs. Theresa L. Kidder, reader; William F. Dodge, violinist. The orchestra will furnish music during the course of the entertainment. The entertainment will be a new feature, for in previous years the ball has been the only attraction.

HUMAN NATURE.

Heroism is human nature at its best. But little of it is seen by the pessimistic mind in these latter days, and yet, while such unselfish risk and loss of life as took place off our coast the past week are heralded, and well they merit it, as being pre-eminently heroic, there is an undercurrent of self-forgetful courage in the life of almost everyone.

THE HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

The country has reason to feel thankful to that association of Lexington's townspeople which has done so much to preserve and to restore for it so many memorials and relics of its early years, Not every town, in these hurry-skurry days of "modern improvements" and materialism, would have felt it possible to spend either the time or the money on 'mere sentiment." But, after all, sentiment is part of life, and a sentiment directed towards the old days, and finding expression in the care for old-time things, cannot but yield an amount of satisfaction not measured in commercial measure,

AMERICAN WASTE.

Judge Simeon E. Baldwin, of Connecticut, in a recent address, declared that the American people are extravagant in their living, as compared with the other nations of the globe. That it is true, to a considerable extent, seems certain. We are undoubtedly the richest nation in the world today, and it must be confessed that we are given to the display of our wealth. Economy, while strictly prac-tised in many homes, is not a characteristic of us as a whole, in either our private or our public menage. Our resources have been, and in most cases still are, so enormous as to seem practically inexhaustible. And thus we have gone on spending each day's earnings as fast as, if not faster than, they have come in, in the full confidence of our ability to take care of the morrow.

It is said, by those who claim to know, that the waste of the average American family is sufficient to support the average French family in comfort. The waste in municipal and national affairs is no less great. We have been running through our patrimony at a rate which would bankrupt us sooner or later, were it to continue. Our saving grace, thus far, has been and is the fact that the United States are capable of supporting many times their present population. When the day comes that this limit is reached, we must have learned our lesson of economy, if we are to continue as a nation. The homes of the people is the place where this lesson must be begun. Our government "of the people, for the people, and by the people" is based upon the people. As are they, so will be their government. In these days of agitation and disquiet between "labor" and "capital," one fact is but little regarded, namely: That the possibilities of labor becoming a capitalistic factor in the process of evolution are very great. The millions of labor's savings which are invested in the savings banks of the country already bear witness. So soon as labor awakes to the idea that its money is equally competent with that of the "capitalist" to run railways, to finance monopolies, and to form "trusts" and that, in addition, it has the votes wherewith to carry out its purposes; then will the time be ripe for an harmonious adjustment of the matters at issue. A pittance per week from each laborer in the land, which could easily be spared by him at the cost of a little economy, would roll up into a total which would make of him the capitalist par excel-

Rev. Edward Schofield, of Hudson, delivered an interesting lecture on "Ireland and Her Warrior Children," last Sunday night, in the town hall. Preceding the lecture was a concert, consisting of Irish meiodies, both vocal and instrumental. Miss Frizelle, contralto, sang "Kathleen Mavourneen"; Miss Agnes Kelly, of Bedford, soprano, sang "Meeting of the Waters" and "Believe Me. If All Those Enduring Young Charms"; Joseph Veazle, of Chelsea, baritone, sang the ballad, "Asthore"; and Patrick Kelley, of Waltham, sang "The Palms." The singing was accompanied by harp, violin and fitte.

MRS. JOHN H. FOSTER.

Nellie L., wife of John H. Foster, died last week Thursday at her home in Billerica, at the age of 57. The funeral was held at her late residence on Main street, the following Saturday, at 2 p.m. The services were conducted by Rev. Edgar Weirs, pastor of the Unitarian church. Many loving relatives and friends gathered to express their sympathy and to mourn with those who mourned. The casket was covered with a profusion of flowers brought by loving hands. The services at the house and at the grave were made impressive and appropriate by singing of her favorite songs. She leaves a husband, a daughter and four sisters. Mrs. Foster was one of a family of fifteen,—seven brothers and eight sisters.—of whom but four sisters are left. She was the youngest sister of Mrs. Bradford A. Smith, of East Lexington, and aunt to Mrs. Whitney Foster, of Concord avenue, Lexington. Twice during her life she had been a resident of that town.

LEXINGTON HISTORICAL SO-

At the meeting of the Historical society, last Tuesday night, in the Hancock-Clarke house, the reports of committees were read and officers for the coming year were elected. Rev. Carlton H. Staples, the retiring president, has kept the society up to a highly prosp-rous condition by his earnest and well-directed efforts, and his retirement is due to that unwritten law which limits the term of service to two years. The officers for the coming year were elected as follows: President, Geo. O. Smith; vice-presidents, Rev. C. F. Carter, F. C. Childs, H. Reed, Miss E. S. Parker, Miss E. E. Harrington; recording secretary, Irving P. Fox; treasurer, L. A. Saville; historian, Rev. C. A. Staples; custodian, Dr. F. S. Piper; corresponding secretary, Geo. O. Smith; house committee, G. O. Whiting, Rev. C. A. Staples, A. C. Washburn, A. Bradford Smith, Miss M. A. Munroe, Mrs. E. B. Lane; committee on publication, J. P. Munroe, A. S. Parsons, Rev. C. A. Staples, Miss M. E. Hudson, Irving P. Fox.

ACCEPTS PASTORATE.

Rev. John Hosmer Cox, of Lexington, has accepted an unanimous call by the Baptist church of West Harwich, Mass., to preach in that place, and he will begin his labors there next week. Rev. and Mrs. Cox will move their household goods at once and make their home in West Harwich. Mr. Cox received the call a few days ago, and decided to accept, as it was the des re of his future parishioners that he settle there without delay.

It was with great regret among the Lexington Baptists, and in fact the people at large, that they learned of the intentions of the popular pastor, who resigned his charge of the Lexington church last June. Rev. Mr. Cox was called to Lexington from Merrimac, where he was located when the summons came, July 1, 1895. Not only among the church people, but among all his acquaintances, Mr. Cox has been exceedingly popular, and his interest in all that pertained to the welfare of the town was marked to a noticeable degree. He is assured of the good wishes of a large circle of friends in hs future work.

and Frank A. Hagar Appointed to tate the Position.

Recent announcment was made of the retirement of Frederick W. Hagar, probation officer of the Third District Court of Eastern Middlesex, of which district Arlington and Belmont are parts. Mr. Hagar retires after a service of 20 years. He is succeeded by his son, Frank A. Hagar, who was immediately appointed by Judge Almy and two weeks ago assumed the duties of the office.

It is not often that such an event oceurs—the resignation of the father followed by the appointment of the son.
But when things do come about in this way, the city or town in which such faithful officers serve is always to be envied. The elder Hagar's resignation can only be considered in the light of a loss to the entre community, but there

LESSON XII, FIRST QUARTER, INTER-NATIONAL SERIES, MARCH 23.

Text of the Lesson, Eph. v, 11-21. Memory Verses, 15-18-Golden Text, Eph. v, 18-Commentary Prepared by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

[Copyright, 1902, by American Press Association.] 11, 12. "Have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness." This week's study in this epistle and the next on the resurrection need not necessarily break the continuity of our study of the acts of the apostles, for in all the Scriptures we have the things concerning Him of whom Philip spake to the eunuch and whom we must see as the center of every lesson. In this epistle we are, as one has said, taken into the presence chamber of secret counsels and purposes concerning us. Only as we by faith enter into His love and purposes will we be delivered from the works of darkness mentioned in chapter iv. 31; I Cor. vi, 9, 10; Gal. v, 19-

ing a child of the Lord Almighty (II Cor. vi, 14-18). 13, 14. "Awake thou that sleepest and arise from the dead and Christ shall give thee light." The three favored apostles, heavy with sleep on the Mount of Transfiguration and actually sleeping in Gethsemane, show us how the most highly favored believers may be indifferent to the great things of God and how this cry, 'Awake thou that sleepest," may apply

Intemperance, as generally understood, is one of the many works of darkness, but the child of God should be free from all if he would know the joy of be-

15, 16. "See, then, that ye walk circumspectly, not as fools, but as wise, redeeming the time, because the days are The Revised Version has on these two verses either in the text or the margin "Look therefore carefully how ye walk," "buying up the opportunity." The life of the believer is spoken of as a continual dying to self, an overcoming, a conflict, a race (II Cor. iv, 11; I John v, 4, 5; Eph. vi, 12; Heb. xii, 1), but in this epistle and elsewhere it is also called "a walk." In the climax in Isa. xl, 31, the walking-that is, the steady plodding-is more difficult than the mounting on wings or the running. We are entreated to walk worthy of our vocation, not as other gentiles walk, to walk in love, as children of light, to walk worthy of God, who hath called us unto His kingdom and glory (Eph. iv, 1, 17; v, 2, 8; I Thess. ii, 12). As to buying up the opportunities, if we had the zeal of unscrupulous business men, who for their own gain make corners in even the necessaries of life, how much might be accomplished in the service of Christ? If we walked as Christ walked (I John ii, 6), all would be well, but who is sufficient? Our sufficiency is of God (II Cor. iii, 5).
17. "Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord It is not the will of God that ar should perish, for He will have all to be saved and has made full provision for the same (II Pet. iii, 9; I Tim. ii, 4; John iii, When sinners are saved, He desires that they should be holy and so fully yield to Him that they may prove in daily life how good and acceptable and perfect His will is (I Thess. iv, 3; Rom. xii, 1, 2). Our blessed Lord could truly say "I seek not mine own will." "I delight to do thy will, O my God" (John iv, 34; v, 30; vi, 38; Ps. xl, 8).

18. "Be not drunk with wine, wherein is excess, but be filled with the Spirit." Drunkenness belongs to the unfruitful works of darkness; to be filled with the Spirit is the privilege of every child of Wine stimulates and exhilarates unnaturally, but the Holy Spirit stimulates supernaturally; the one is for self, the other for God. There is a drunkenness that does not come from wine or strong drink (Isa. xxix, 9), but is just as much the work of the adversary. Only that which is of God through Christ gives light and life; all that is not of God causes stupor and drunkenness, and the manifestation of the flesh as God only can give life, so God only can live in us the life He desires, and He is pleased to do this by His Spirit, therefore the necessity of being filled with the Spirit by whom alone the life can be lived. 19. "Speaking to yourselves in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing and making melody in your heart to the A drunken man is apt to make himself known by his noisy talk or ribald song, but a Spirit filled person, having true melody in his heart, will sing unto the Lord. Each proclaims his master by that which comes from the abundance of his heart. In Col. iii, 16, we have the same result from the word of Christ dwelling richly in us; therefore, according to an axiom which says that things that are equal to the same thing are equal to one another, there is probably some connection between being filled with the Spirit and filled with the word of God. We know that the Spirit has written the word, and the Spirit is the word, and the word of God, the Lord Jesus, is the em-bodiment and manifestation of the written word. If we would be filled by the Spirit and used by the Spirit, let us lay up His word diligently in our hearts

(Ezek. iii, 10, 11).

20. "Giving thanks always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ." In I Thess. v, 18, it is written "In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in 943 Mass. ave., Arlington Christ Jesus concerning you." How earnestly we should covet to be filled with the Spirit since He alone can live this holy and beautiful life in us! "He who spared not His own Son, but delivered Him up for us all, how shall He not, with Him, also freely give us all things' (Rom. viii, 32), and since "God is love" and has so loved us, He cannot give us anything that is not love, so we will thank Him for all things if we believe this. Mrs. Bottome tells of two waiters whom she saw accidentally jostle one another, the one thereby spilling some hot water on the other, who meekly replied, "Never mind, it is all in the will." A lady whom I know told me that having spilled a bottle of ink on her carpet she was able to take it meekly and as part of

21. "Submitting yourselves one to another in the fear of God." Some one has said that submission is the highest mission on earth, higher than home or for-eign missions, and that unless one has learned it he is not fit for missionary service anywhere. In His life at Naza-reth, in His baptism, in His public minis-try and in His sufferings our Lord fully try and in His sufferings our Lord fully manifested this grace of the Spirit. As

A QUEER BUSINESS.

Making Up Beggars So That They Will Excite Public Sympathy.

"How beggars are made" might be made the subject of a singularly interesting article. And it would refer not to the unkind cuts of fortune, but to the appliances whereby a certain dest and none too scrupulous manufacturer equips men and women who, for purposes of their own, wish to be considered lame, halt or blind. That it is easier to be crippled than to work is the maxim upon which this particular trade is established.

"I'm what is called a street 'sham fakir," said one of these dealers in disguises recently. "I fake up most of the sham disabled mill operatives, crippled sailors, etc., and charge 'em a small fee. If it's a woman with a tale that her husband beats her, I paint her the King and made acquainted with His a black eye and put her arm in a sling. Say it's a man on a 'blind' lay. Well, I paint some scars on his face to insitate the marks of a lead explosion and give him a green eye shade and a 'blind' card.

"If a man's really maimed, it makes it easier. Suppose he's been run over and had his leg off. I paint a picture of a burning house and him jumping out of a top window with a child in his arms and a yarn under it, 'Kind friends, I lost my leg through rescuing my employer's child.' That's a sume take of a 'fiver' a day.

"I make all these rigs myself," he said, "and hire 'em out. It pays, but I have to keep dark, for the police are very down on my sort. This hollow wooden cap with an iron hook fits over your head, and here's a clubfoot beet and yonder a pair for both feet. "A queer business? You'd say so x you knew the jobs I'm asked to de sometimes. Only yesterday a woman wanted vitriol scars made on her face and actually wanted me to use real vitriol. Didn't know what she was asking? Oh, yes! Why, bless you, some beggars'll maul themselves horribly to excite sympathy. In fact, they'd de anything rather than work." - New York World.

SPRINKLING SINGAPORE.

The Solemn Procession That Accompanies the Watering Cart. Poultney Bigelow in his description of the marvelous progress made by the city of Singapore under English rule gave a quaint picture of the manner which the streets are watered:

The watering cart was drawn by ixtle white bullocks and driven by Malays with turbans. It seemed to take five Malays to do this driving. One roosted aloft on top of the barrel for the purpose of controlling the outgo of water. He seemed very proud of his appointment. Another native in a big turban roosted on the pole and controlled the little cattle. Then there was a man in thin brown legs and much turban who walked solemply behind enjoying a footbath. He was obviously a government functionary, although his exact sphere of usefulness I could not discover. He appeared to be something in the nature of a rear guard. Then there was a "foreloper," or advance guard, for the purpose of clearing the way. There appeared to be an idea that the little bullocks might suddenly go mad and rush ahead. At any rate, it gave congenial employment to one more native, and that was something There was yet another, who bent down now and then to pick up a piece of stone or brush away some irregularity unseen by ordinary eyes. This outfit was a treat to me. It was solemn; it was full of self consciousness; it was magnificently oriental. I have seen men in sublime moments; I have seen the red capped station master of Germany strut up and down his platform when an imperial train was about to arrive, but even that impressed me less than the watering cart of Singapore, with its municipal hierarchy of Malay ministers, each earning perhaps 2 cents a day.

Doves and Coronations. At the ancient ceremonies of coronation of the French kings, after the anointing had been performed, some white doves were let loose in the church. This was supposed to symbolize the power of the Holy Ghost in directing the king's actions. A similar idea seems to have inspired all early kings, for among the English regalia is the rod of equity or the scepter with the dove. This is simply a golden for with a mound at the top, which supports a cross. On this cross is a dove, fashioned of white enamel, with expanded wings. Some fine diamonds ornament the rod in various places.

No Excuse This Time. "It was a new gun, your honor," pretested the prisoner, "and I did not know it was loaded." "But," argued the judge, "the dealer has just told us that you did not pay for the weapon.'

"What has that to do with it?" "Well, if you didn't pay for it the dealer must have charged it for you." And the judge tried to look as much like the pictures of Solomon as be could.—Baltimore American.

A WONDERFUL ESCAPE.

Terrible Experience of a Hunter With an Indian Band.

One of the most remarkable instances of the escape of a white man from the Indians was that of John Colter, a famous hunter and trapper. On the day in question he and his companion were surrounded by 600 savage warriors. The companion was instantly killed, and Colter was captured. His foes had no intention of saving his life, however. They wanted the sport of putting him to the torture or at least of playing with him as a cat plays with a mouse. The chief asked him if he could run. He said. "Not much."

He was released and told to save his life if he could. Colter darted away at high speed, and most of the 600 savages set off after him. There was a plain before him six miles wide, bounded on the far side by a river fringed with trees. Colter had always been famous as a runner, and his practice now stood him in good stead. He made straight across the plain for the stream, and the yells of his pursuers lent him wings. His foes had removed every shred of clothing from his body, and the plain was cov-stride Half way across the plain he glanced back and saw that only a few Indians were following him. Again he ran on and soon realized that one of his pursuers was nearing him. He redoubled his efforts, and blood gushed from his nostrils and flowed down over his protected feet were lacerated at every breast. The fringe of trees was near, but a hasty backward look showed him the pursuing brave close upon him with spear raised. Moved by a sudden impulse, Colter stopped, turned and faced the savage with outstretched arms.

The Indian was so taken aback at this unexpected movement that he stumbled and fell! This was Colter's opportunity. He ran back, seized the spear and, pinning his antagonist to the ground, ran on.

Other savages came on, fiercer than before at the death of their comrade, but Colter reached the trees, plunged into their midst and then into the river and swam to a pile of driftwood that had lodged. He dived beneath it and stuck his head up between two logs covered with smaller timbers and brush. The Indians came up and searched over the driftwood. Luckily they did not fire it, as he feared they would. At last they went away. Then Colter swam out and fled through the forest. Seven days he went on, living on roots and berries, with no clothing, until at last he reached a trading post on the Bighorn river. He never fully re-

A case for a handwriting expert was noticed at one of the downtown banks the other day. A treasurer of one of the many charitable organizations of this city had received a check to be devoted to that certain charity, and he was desirous of acknowledging it, but could not read the signature. He took the check to the bank on which it was drawn and questioned one of the clerks as to the signature and was told that it was genuine, but could not get the desired information. It was next taken to the paying teller, who also declared that it was genuine, but even he could not make out who it was and had to consult the card catalogue. There was not the slightest resemblance between the signature to the check and the real name.-New York

The "Bad" Boys.

The "bad" boys are often the best boys in the neighborhood. All they want is a chance to do something. Don't expect healthy, active boys to want to be tied up in books and so called improving occupations continually. DIAMOND BACK TERRAPIN.

Formerly Despised, They Are Now Considered a Delicacy.

Half a century or so ago diamond back terrapin were fed to slaves and hogs. Today they are the rarest delicacy known to the epicurian world, says the Philadelphia North American.

Then they sold for $1 a barrel, and laborers, when hiring out, specified that they must not be compelled to eat terrapin more than twice a week. Today a barrel is cheap at $800, and millionaires travel hundreds of miles for a chance to feast on this most delicious of all meats.

Of course this means genuine diamond backs. There are many imitations.

Every first class restaurant in the country features "terrapin a la Maryland" on its menu, but in not one case out of a hundred is the real terrapin served. The diner regales himself on what he believes to be Maryland's choicest dish. Instead he is merely eating fresh water turtles, "sliders" or 'North Carolina goldens."

The reason is simple. Restaurateurs don't serve real diamond backs because they can't get them. The world's total terrapin population does not exceed 25,000 of legal size, and these are confined to the shores of the Chesapeake bay, the only place that produces them.

Baltimore, Philadelphia and New York enjoy a monopoly. These three cities get practically the entire output. but few ever find their way across the Blue Ridge. The epicure unfortunate enough to be born in Chicago or St. Louis must either come east or forego the joys of terrapin.

To select a real diamond back amateurs should be guided by these distinguishing and characteristic markings:

It is of a greenish, dark olive color, sometimes running to spotted gray, yellow on the plate which surrounds the shell and has concentric dark stripes along the plate on both shells. The sides of the head are a dirty white, sprinkled with small black spots. The bottom shell is of whitish yellow. The males are much larger than the females and have the concentric streaks much better defined. The female has the more delicate flesh. The male can be distinguished by his toe nails, which are much longer than those of the fe-
